Prevent cord mishaps

During the holiday season, cables and cords rack up a list of violations that reads like the penalty section of the NFL referees' handbook. Tripping. Blocking. Holding. Cut down on the 10- and 15-yard flags with the Transparent Cord Protector, which protects decorative lighting from foot traffic in the home. The see-through protectors blend with the floor or carpet and show off lights if you want to see them; or they can keep passers-by from tripping on the cable that's powering the Leg Lamp from "A Christmas Story." It's available in 5- ($19.99), 10- ($39.99) and 25-foot ($99.95) lengths and fits over bundles up to half an inch in diameter. Visit www.cableorganizer.com.

Fizzy cola on tap

OK, we know this thing looks crazy. And the name – the Fizz Saver – sounds a little nutty too. But the product is actually pretty handy. The Fizz Saver dispenser keeps drinks carbonated and dispenses them from your fridge. That means no more leaving soda bottles around. And no more spills. And no more flat soda. All you do is twist the Fizz Saver onto the top of a plastic 2-liter bottle, then turn the bottle over to begin serving drinks. Available for $12.98 at www.shopgetorganized.com.

Save water luxuriously

With the economy still residing in the bottom of a giant toilet bowl, it might seem a bit out of place or inappropriate to be touting Moen's new luxurious and stylish bathroom collection. But in addition to its soft, modern-style cues, high-arc spouts and lever handles, the Fina line also boasts efficiency – according to Moen, the faucets in the line have met the Environmental Protection Agency's new guidelines for water-efficient products. This should help you feel better when you're day-dreaming about the Roman tub faucet and hand shower with modern styling, which complements the suite's Euro design.
